The average maturity across all tranches is approx. 8.8 years with an average yield of approx. 1.8%. With this notes issuance, the average interest rate over all financing instruments used for the acquisition of Quirónsalud will be significantly below the originally projected 2.0%.

The notes were drawn under the newly established Fresenius European Medium Term Note (EMTN) Programme and issued by Fresenius Finance Ireland plc., a wholly owned subsidiary of Fresenius SE & Co. KGaA. The programme enables Fresenius to issue notes in various currencies and maturities in a standardized format.

Fresenius has applied to the Luxembourg Stock Exchange to admit the notes to trading on its regulated market.
